Introduction: Getting from O to C

- Getting from the generic opening to the specifics of your challenge
- Papers you quote should go from general to the problem area to specifically about the area you want to study
- Trick: start from your challenge and work backwards

Covering the literature

- In HCI, you must show that you have read the literature
 - Are there papers that are classics in your area?
 - Have you shown a broad enough search?
- Width and depth will depend on the length of your paper

Quoting from papers

- Don't start with the authors:
 - Giovanni and Kristal found that...
- Unless!
 - Theory, methodology, questionnaire/survey
 - Author has results that differ from others
 - Comparing contrasting results from two authors

Challenge

- To find X, we did Y
